Dear Hiring Manager

Feeling the need to further strive for greater challenges and professional growth, and satisfying my lust for the frustration to solving problems developed my interest in software development.

First majoring in criminology, I pursued customer experience to better enhance my communication skills from working in the food-beverage industry for companies like Starbucks to booming a personal sales specials for luxury fashion for companies like Louis Vuitton and Chanel. However, feeling the need to reach for a higher pinnacle and professional development I developed an interest in software development where I can transfer my skills as a sales specialist to software development.

Being able to point out the advantages, disadvantages, and strategically finding new ways to improve myself and the merchandise/program/function and having strong communication skills are skills that I feel makes a strong leader and team player that I can bring to the company.

For more information regarding my skills and achievements, please contact through my email barry_pun@hotmail.com, you can also reach me through my number at 778-302-1578

Sincerely,

Barry Pun
