PROFILE

My passion for web development started when I was a kid learning how to beat a video game. There is always a different method, strategy, and approach to clearing the level. As a lifelong learner and an advocate for mental health, I am passionate to learn about different strategies and methods using web development to support and empower those struggling with mental health. Paired with my affable personality and distinctive communication skills, I believe that I have the tools to succeed as a web developer.
