PROFILE

Working for a tech consultancy after graduating from university, I developed a strong passion for the tech world due to the infinite power technology possesses and the immense value it provides to our society. Hence, I decided to pursue software engineering so that I can make a positive impact in the world through programming. Having had a demanding sales role in the past coupled with 2 years of experience as a low code software developer, I bring a unique palette of skills to the table - strong communication and leadership skills with core competencies of a developer.
